A number of Britishers were recently talking about the question of England's maintaining a supremacy over the Suez canal when one of them said: "They may be able to take it away pleaded not guilty to a breach of the from us by force of arms, but they

> "How so?" asked one of the party. "I was a member of the British embassy at Berlin when the ambassador received a cipher telegram from London saying that a big block of stock of the Suez canal had been offered for sale at Cairo. He was directed to send some one there to make the purchase at any price. He called me into his race as to who would get there first to make the purchase. The Germans would be surely after it. If it were in my own proper person I stole out after dark.

"The route I chose was by rail to Genoa, thence by sea to Cairo. On the me was a lady who from her cast of features, her dark eyes and hair I set down as being Turkish. She was certainly of an oriental type and a very beautiful woman. It is quite a journey from Berlin to Genoa, and the lady and I were in the same compartment together for a long while. Smoking was not allowed in the compartment, but when at a certain time all had left it but she and I she took out a box of eigarettes and asked me in French- the medium between different nationalities on the continent-if I objected to her smoking. I said no, and she offered me the box. I declined the offer, whereupon she took out one, lighted it and began to smoke.

"My suspicions were aroused by seeing her every few moments apply her handkerchief to her mouth and nose, I fancying that she did so to inhale something on it that would counteract an effect. My suspicions were confirmed by a peculiar odor in the smoke and a languer stealing over me. I at son and children of Beverly, Mass., F. H. couldn't get it down, I had just enough command of my forces to smash the glass with my fist. The :: fresh air revived me, and when I turned again to the Turkish lady she, in well affected surprise, said:

"'Monsieur is sensitive to tobacco smoke?

"'Very,' I replied.

"I was satisfied that she had been sent to delay me, and since by my man ner I indicated that I was on my guard she made no further attempt to interfere with me. When we left the kept my eye on her and saw her heading for a telegraph office. I did not doubt that she would send a message to announce her failure, and some one else who stood ready would take up her work where she had left off.

"The dirst night out from Genoa I was walking the deck, taking my usual smoke before turning in. It was quite late, and there were but a few persons still up. I was near the stern of the vessel when a gentleman came from the taffrail and as he reached me scopped and said in French with an Italian

"The phosphorous illumination in the wake of the ship is very beautiful." "Without forethought I went the few yards between me and the taffrall and was looking over when the man who had followed me seized me and lifted me to throw me over. Luckily for me

MUSIC'S UNIQUE QUALITY.

Wherein It Differs From Sculpture, Poetry and Painting.

Music finds its perfection in itself without relation to other objects. It is what it is in itself alone. It is nondefinitive; it does not use symbols of something else; it cannot be translated into other terms.

The poet seeks always a complete union of the thing said and the method "The next morning and all the rest of saying it.
